15th Annual Spring Seminar a Resounding Success for Klasko Immigration Law Partners

Philadelphia, PA Over 200 professionals and staff members in the field of employment-based immigration attended the 15th annual Spring Seminar presented by Klasko Immigration Law Partners, LLP on Tuesday, April 16, 2019, at the Union League of Philadelphia. The sold-out event, entitled “2019 Climate Change: Navigating a Difficult Immigration Environment,” was a resounding success for Klasko Immigration Law Partners, LLP, the country’s leading immigration law firm.

Highlights of the symposium included opening remarks by the firm’s managing partner, H. Ronald Klasko, covering the latest administrative updates and trends in immigration law. In his opening statements, Ron discussed the increasing challenges faced by professionals in the field, followed by in-depth sessions covering RFE and adjudication data trends, plus outlining strategies for success. The mid-day breakout sessions were teeming with guests as well as guidance on specific issues encountered by corporations, hospitals, and universities that rely on hiring foreign nationals to expand their workforce. Ron also led two well-attended sessions covering an emerging immigration strategy for success: litigation. Alongside Lisa Felix, he presented the latest update on the unlawful presence litigation; and concluded the breakout sessions, joined by Andrew Zeltner, with a panel on challenging denials and delays with litigation.

Other popular sessions were a panel discussion called “Denials, RFEs and Statistics: How Looking Back Can Help Move Forward,” featuring Michele Madera, Feige Grundman and Elise Fialkowski analyzing USCIS published data. An intimate session discussing the evaluation process when deciding to pursue an EB-1 petition was led by William Stock, Feige Grundman, and Lisa Felix.

As leaders in the field of immigration law, the Philadelphia-based attorneys at Klasko Immigration Law Partners, LLP, are extremely active in the community and remain involved in local events throughout the year.
