Breaking News and Impact on Immigration Policies

PHILADELPHIA April 8, 2020 -- Klasko Immigration Law Partners, LLP announces a new and live webinar covering the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic on U.S. immigration. Join the country's leading employment-based immigration lawyers as they cover a broad range of topics regarding the COVID-19 outbreak across the nation on Thursday, April 16, 2020. Attendees will gain a fresh perspective on the latest immigration management concerns for companies, universities, hospitals, and research organizations.

Topics will include:

- Update on immigration agencies and travel issues globally
- Identifying compliance concerns when working from home or remotely
- Handling changes in employment, leaves, furloughs, and other employment status changes
- Update on the H-1B lottery and this year's results

The coronavirus (COVID-19) has brought many changes to businesses in the communities affected by the outbreak. Governors and local governments are temporarily shutting down non-essential businesses in an effort to "flatten the curve" and mitigate the spread of the new virus. This, of course, has had a substantial impact on immigration in various industries, schools and universities, hospitals and healthcare providers, as well as general immigration regulations.

Through the engaging and informative webinar series hosted by William A Stock, Elise A Fialkowski, and Michele G. Madera, business leaders will not only be updated with the latest developments and breaking news as they relate to immigration policies amid the COVID-19 crisis, but they will also be better prepared to handle any resulting changes across their organizations.

After the April 16 premiere date, the live, virtual events will continue on a biweekly basis. Interested parties are encouraged to register on the firm's website to learn more about the webinar or the firm's employment-based immigration services.
